Re:

Walter Glanze, who has been a senior editor for the past twelve years, will be leaving Bantam this week to form Walter Glanze Word Books Associates, a research and editorial service which will specialize in the development of reference books.

With Bantam as his principal client, Walter will have responsibility for the development and maintenance of Bantam's reference line and dictionary series, with special emphasis on THE SCRIBNER-BANTAM ENGLISH DICTIONARY, which he edited. In addition he will begin compiling THE BANTAM BOOK OF QUOTATIONS which we will publish in the future.

He will also be involved as a consultant in noneditorial aspects of our reference-title publishing program such as cover and production design, sales, and promotion.

Prior to joining Bantam in 1967, Walter was a senior editor and program director for foreign-language projects at Scott, Foresman and Company. Before his immigration to America in 1959, he was a teacher, translator, and writer for the U.S. Government in Germany and France.

I know you all join me in expressing gratitude to Walter for his many contributions to Bantam over the past dozen years and in wishing him well in his new venture.
